AUTHOR

K. A. Miltimore lives in the Pacific Northwest and writes paranormal fantasy & cozy mysteries in the wee hours of the morning. She loves mid-century fashion, 80s music and nachos (not necessarily in that order). With her husband and son, she loves exploring quirky local towns, including Enumclaw, WA (the setting of her Gingerbread Hag series). In addition to a love of writing, she has a Masters in Labor & Employment Law that she is still paying off, a fondness for great Washington red wines, and re-watching the movies that she has forgotten over the years

MEDIA REVIEW

"These sorts of changes have led to more than a few tensions that drive the plot of "Burned to a Crisp" -- as Hedy's home begins to fill up with supernatural strangers, strange and violent crimes start being reported all around town, and Hedy's usual trusting demeanor falters as she wrestles with doubt and realizes she, too, has her own biases against others."

- Enumclaw Courier-Herald

PEER REVIEWS

"This book has that slow burn, cozy feel to it that makes you want to make a cup and curl up in a chair with some cookies as you find out more about the characters in world the author is developing." - Byrd Nash, author of the Wicked Wolves of Windsor and Other Fairytales

"The author takes many of the conventions of the cozy -- small town setting, likable amateur detective, even delicious baked goods -- and gives it a unique spin by incorporating supernatural creatures and folktales from around the world." - Helen Whistberry, author of The Weird Sisters of Wynter's Hill

This well-conceived yarn keeps the reader guessing with a unique cast of characters both human and mythological. The author excels at description and ... the ending is not to be missed, and sets us up for future installments while still being a complete story in and of itself. - Martin Shannon, author of Weird Tales of Florida
